

Energetic Variational Approaches in Charge Transport

Chun Liu
Penn State University

Almost all biological activities involve transport of charged ions in specific biological environments. In this talk, I will discuss a unified energetic variational approach developed specifically for these multiscale-multiphysics problems. I will discuss the relevant classical theories and relevant physical approaches and methods. I will focus on the mathematics, in particular the analytical issues arising from these studies.